Centre for Narendra Modi Studies (CNMS)

VISION & MISSION:

The Centre for Narendra Modi Studies (CNMS) is an independent TRUST and global objective institution to promote unbiased research and in-depth studies. It stands as a platform for dialogue and conflict resolution. ( Registered Trust in Aligarh, UP, India)

It strives to bring together the best available and possible minds in the country to ideate on key national and international issues, to promote initiatives that further the cause of peace and global harmony, to monitor social, economic and political trends that have a bearing on India's unity and integrity and to analyse the causes responsible for social and ethnic conflicts and leading to extremism as also offering policy alternatives, to interact with civil society and offer institutional support for exchange of ideas and interaction among conflicting groups, critique public policy and the working of democratic institutions and constitutional bodies, and evolve benchmarks for good governance and efficiency in public institutions. These objectives fall under a broad head called 'nation-building' and often come within the purview of universities and institutions of higher learning. Regrettably, these academic bodies have failed grandly and gravely to rise to the task. Such a sordid development, it seems, is in some way responsible for the perceived failure of representative bodies and the prevailing inefficiency in the state sector. CNMS believes that many of these institutions, which are central and crucial to our democratic polity, cannot be expected to work better, unless academia, think tanks and civil society engage with each other on a regular basis. Given its deep and abiding commitment to strengthening democracy and the emergence of a strong and self-reliant India, CNMS has embarked upon quality research in a host of areas in the hope that such studies will improve governance, strengthen national security, integrate India's foreign policy to the nation's long-term objectives and bring about much-needed functional efficiency in Parliament and other representative bodies as well as in public institutions.

OBJECTIVES:

The Centre for Narendra Modi Studies (CNMS) is an India based think-tank set up with the collaborative efforts of leading security experts, educators, civil servants and philanthropists under the aegis of the NaMo Kendra across the world. The CNMS's objective is to become a centre of excellence to kick start innovative ideas and thoughts that can lead to a stronger, secure and prosperous country, playing its destined role in global affairs.

Shri Narendra Modi is undoubtedly the architect of New India. The purpose of the Centre is to organize a number of programmes on the theme of life, thoughts and achievements of Narendra Modi as well as on subjects like New India, Aatmanirbhar Bharat, Sabka Sath-Sabka Vikas-Sabka Vishwaas, Indian democracy, nationalism, Indian's foreign policy and India's economic development. The Centre aims to organise a seminar on Narendra Modi Model after seventy-five years of India's Independence and seventy year of the Indian Constitution besides organising a number of workshops for college students, research scholars and teachers.

From the next academic year, the CNMS plans to introduce a few short term workshop's on New India & Aatmanirbhar Bharat, India's freedom movement and Indian democracy in the light of current problems. The Centre may introduce few inter-disciplinary courses in the present scheme of Credit System. The CNMS plans to bring out a number of publications on themes relevant to contemporary times. Historically, India has been a hub of knowledge and wisdom since ages. This knowledge reservoir can be seen and read in the form of Vedas, Panchatantra and numerous treatises on medicine, astronomy, mathematics, chemistry, logic, etc. which bear testimony to the power of the nation called India. Some of the oldest languages of the world are spoken in the country. All this indicates that India as a nation has the capacity to lead the world as the innovative ideas may emerge from this fountainhead of classical reservoir which will certainly illuminate the world.

REMEMBERING CHANDRA SHEKHAR'S VISION FOR THE RURAL ECONOMY

If alive, former Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar would have been 95 last Sunday, 17 April. Three days before that eventful day, Prime Minister Narendra Modi inaugurated the Pradhan Mantri Sanghralaya, the Prime Ministers' Museum in New Delhi. The museum is a tribute to all the Prime Ministers of the country to date, irrespective of their ideology or tenure, and their significant contribution towards nation-building. One of the goals of such a place is to sensitise and inspire the younger generation about India's Prime Ministers, their leadership, vision, and achievements. But more than that, the museum also takes a look at the journey which took India to where we are today. This assumes even greater significance as India marks 75 years of its independence. The mega celebration campaign, 'Azadi Ka Amrit Mahotsav' has introduced us to the pathway of 'atmanirbharta' or self-reliance. In this context we can say that though his term was short, the then PM Chandra Shekhar had a vision of self-reliance. His vision was to strengthen the rural economy and agro cooperative movement to make India's poor self-reliant and independent.

This is an appropriate time to acknowledge Chandra Shekhar's vision for promoting the rural economy through the cooperative movement, which is necessary for rural entrepreneurship. Chandra Shekhar had a short stint as a Prime Minister but played long innings as a parliamentarian. Little wonder that several significant decisions designed the country's future course during his time. In a well-known compilation of "Dynamics of Social Change," he discussed his idea of self-reliance and promoting the rural economy in a developing country.

India's former Prime Minister Chandra Shekhar

In a famous marathon walk (the Padayatra) from Kanyakumari in the extreme South to Rajghat in New Delhi, covering about 4260 km, Chandra Shekhar, as a "young Turk", renewed his rapport with the rural masses and understood the pressing problems in the country. Then he aggressively pushed for agro-based industries through cooperative movements such as Khadi Gram Udyog in India.

During one of his speeches in the Rajya Sabha in 1965, he talked about ways to strengthen the agro-industries "The biggest problem in our country today is that we do not come forward openly to find a solution to the country's problems. I feel that the Agricultural Co-operative Movement is basically a political movement. Still, I feel that if the Cooperative Movement is associated with the agricultural sector, it will lead to fundamental changes regarding the property rights". The Cooperative Movement was aimed to increase the production of food grains in the interest of landowners having less than one acre of land. He mentions that there was no other way except the initiation of the Cooperative Movement to utilize the available scientific methods of agriculture and ensure the development of the small farmers. "The poor whose hopes were shattered and whose development was blocked will benefit," he had regretted. Participating in the Resolution on Agricultural Cooperatives" in 1964, Chandra Shekhar also said, "The State will face a profound crisis if we do not make efforts to improve agriculture and agro-industries in the States." A great promoter of sustainable agriculture and rural economy, he paved the way by highlighting a roadmap for agro-based cooperative movements. As the country moves on the development pathway, the late Chandra Shekhar's vision of aligning the rural economy to self-reliance assumes great significance. —JASIM MOHAMMAD
